Eleven Killed and 100 Injured As Train Hits Auto

Electric Passenger Ditched When It Strikes Car At Grade Crossing.

130 PEOPLE ON TRAIN

Many Taken To Hospital Have Broken Arms and Legs.

KENOSHIA, Wis., Feb. 24.—(AP)—Eleven persons were killed and one hundred injured when a Chicago bound North Shore and Milwaukee electric railway passenger train struck an automobile at a grade crossing and derailed late last night. The driver and passenger of the automobile along with nine passengers of the train were killed.

The five cars of the passenger train, which carried 130 passengers, went to the bottom of an eight-foot ditch beside the right-of-way, but all remained upright.

Trains operating on the North Shore line are reputedly the fastest of the electric type in the country. The passenger train was traveling at high speed, witnesses said, when it struck the automobile, hurling it onto the northbound track where it was struck by a 16-car freight.

Calls were sent to every available doctor and nurse in Kenosha. Emergency treatment was given many in the darkness of the accident scene. As rapidly as possible the injured were removed to a hospital.

At the Kenosha hospital it was said 25 wreck victims were being treated there. Many had broken legs or arms. St. Katherine's hospital was treating 35 patients from the wreck, and said several cases were serious.

There was so much confusion immediately following the crash that even police were unable to determine at once where bodies of the dead were taken.

Near Riot As Harold Lloyd Movie Is Shown

SHANGHAI, Feb. 24.—(AP)—First showing of Harold Lloyd's first talking picture, "Welcome Danger," at the international settlement foreign theater resulted in a demonstration by 350 Chinese students in the audience.

The students handled the theater manager roughly, demanded their money back and one of them hurled a giant firecracker into the center of the theater, causing a near stampede.

A part of the film depicting alleged underworld life in San Francisco's China town, in which Chinese opium smugglers were portrayed, caused the displeasure of the students who charged the picture was "unfriendly and derogatory to the Chinese people."

Police dispersed the demonstrators who had asked and obtained a refund of their admission price, and arrested the ring leader who was said to be a scenario writer for a Chinese motion picture company.

Where Alcohol Explosion Spreads Death

Ruins of the Standard Oil Company plant at Elizabeth, N. J., which became seething inferno as flames followed disastrous explosion which killed and injured many workers, is shown above. ## Five Are Injured As Truck Overturns

Hubert Landes In Serious Condition As Result of Accident Sunday.

Hubert Landes, aged 15, son of J. N. Landes, farmer living 15 miles south of Hope, narrowly escaped death late yesterday afternoon when a truck in which he was riding went into a ditch one and one-half miles north of the Lewisville airport on the Hope and Lewisville road.

Four other youths, Lloyd Nelson, Ulysses Landes, Otis Alexander and Ray Sewell, were slightly injured. They were cut and bruised when the truck overturned.

The youths were en route to Lewisville when the accident occurred. According to reports received here they were going down an incline at a high rate of speed and were watching an airplane flying over Lewisville at the time. Ulysses Landes, brother of the injured youth, was driving the truck and apparently lost control of the machine, and is said to have gone off into a ditch which was about 15 feet deep, turning the truck completely over.

Hubert Landes was riding with another youth in the truck bed and the other three were in the cab. Hubert suffered a deep gash on the side of his face and his ear was sliced almost off, he also suffered from a hole in the back part of his head.

The other boys underwent medical attention at Lewisville and were able to return to their homes, while young Landes was picked by R. J. Pearce pressman for The Star, and brought to this city where he was placed in a local hospital.

Husband Kills Wife and Self

Jealousy Is Believed To Be Cause of Texarkana Tragedy.

TEXARKANA, Feb. 24.—Believed to have been aroused by jealousy, Joe Hokes, aged 52, shot and fatally wounded his wife, Mrs. Pearl Hokes, 27, and then killed himself at their home here last night.

Mrs. Hokes died in an ambulance en route to a hospital. The couple had a son, and Mrs. Hokes also had a son, 21, and a daughter, 17, by a former husband from whom she was divorced. The daughter witnessed the double tragedy.

The couple moved here from Mauld, 25 miles south of here, about seven years ago. Hokes had been out of employment for several months while Mrs. Hokes worked at the basket factory. Officers said they learned the couple frequently quarreled because of the husband's non-employment and is said to have told Hokes "that she was tired of supporting him and was going to divorce him."

Hokes appeared in the dining room while Mrs. Hokes was eating and without a word of warning fired at her twice with a shotgun, both charges hitting their mark. He then reloaded the gun and shot himself.

Mrs. Hokes is survived by five brothers and one sister, all residents of Bowie county.

Business Women Close Successful Convention Here

Sixth District Conference Draws More Than 60 Delegates.

ENDS SUNDAY NOON

Resume of Convention Activities Over Past Week-End.

The sixth district conference of Business and Professional Women's clubs adjourned yesterday noon after an interesting session at Hope city hall and Hotel Barlow which began at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

More than 60 delegates attended from El Dorado, Texarkana, Magnolia, Arkadelphia and Washington, with visitors also registered from Benton, Little Rock, Hot Springs, Camden and Warren.

This conference was the sixth and final of a series planned by the state president, Miss Ruth Alice Wilson of El Dorado, and their success in shaping up the progressive policies of the state and local officers, has been unqualified. The idea of unified co-operation of the women engaged in professional and business life is bearing much fruit and the growth of the federation is steady and the attainments of its goals for further improving the status of its membership clearly apparent, convention officials said.

Miss Mary Burgess of Texarkana, chairman of the sixth district, presided over the opening session, which was called to order by Miss Ruth Alice Wilson.

Glee Club Entertains

The El Dorado glee club led group singing, after which Miss Alice Medford of Camden, state research chairman, gave an excellent address on "Find Yourself and Others." The necessity of knowing our own capabilities and being sure that others also know them was stressed. She urged the maintenance of a card index system by all clubs, and the listing of those who might find themselves out of work or who might desire a change of occupation. "The need for congenial work may mean success or failure in a woman's business life," said Miss Medford.

Mrs. Frank Hicks, Hope, represented Mrs. Ova Stuart, state membership chairman and gave an excellent discussion on "The Life of the Club." She was followed by Miss Leonora Wilson, Little Rock, who ably discussed, "It Pays to Advertise." Miss Wilson is state publicity chairman, was one of the original group of 212 women who met in St. Louis in 1919 and formed the National Federation of Business and Professional Women. That nucleus has resulted in a growth truly remarkable. Over 55,000 women are now associated in this work and are found in every state in the union and in more than a dozen foreign countries.

"But," said Mrs. Wilson, "We advertised and we have found that it paid to advertise and we know that it is going to continue to pay to do so. Advertising is nothing more nor less than publicity. Big business wouldn't spend so much on advertising if it didn't find it a paying investment."

Publicity Needed

"What is publicity?" asked Miss Wilson. "It is the quality or state of being public or open to the knowledge or observation of a community. Advertising is a public notice and without public notice no business or idea can flourish."

"The National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs has arrived at a point where it can tell the world what it is doing and accomplishing and it is news to the balance of the world, and not only to the women world, but the men's world, as well."

"The National, state and local publicity chairmen are telling the world what we are doing—we are compelling the public to observe our activities and in this manner are justifying our existence."

Miss Wilson complimented the clubs of this district for the excellent publicity they have obtained in local and state papers and urged the compilation of a scrap book to preserve these records.

Miss Margaret Simms, Hope state transportation chairman, whose outstanding work in club activities has attracted much attention, spoke on "Merrily We Roll Along," urging the attendance of members at all district, state and national meets and telling of the cooperation that may be obtained from transportation officials.

List of Delegates

At 7:30 Saturday evening in the private dining room of the Hotel Barlow, the banquet was given, with Miss Elizabeth Harrison, local president, toastmaster.

Where Avalanche of Coal Killed Five in New York

Engineers at Work On Burned Generator at City Light Station.

New coils have already been ordered for the generator, which will be ready for operation again probably in two weeks. The switchboard repairs may be made more easily, but the generator has to be rewound. Factory engineers are here tearing the machine down in order to replace the burned parts as soon as the new material arrives.

Mr. Sandefur said adequate service would be maintained on the small generator which has been operating ever since municipal current was restored at noon Saturday.

You'd Know It If You Ever Bought One a 'Luncheon'

DELAWARE, O., Feb. 24.—College co-eds eat more than do college men, says George "Bun" Hoffman, for many years proprietor of Bun's restaurant, traditional rendezvous of Ohio Wesleyan university students here.

If the college women do not actually eat more, least their bills for meals are larger and more promptly paid than those of the men, Hoffman contends.

"Women at Ohio Wesleyan are not gold-diggers, however," he added. "They eat just as much as when they pay for it themselves as when their boy friends foot the bill."

"This reduction fad is mostly talk as far as college girls are concerned. Present students at Ohio Wesleyan eat as much on the average as former students did, fad or no fad."

600,000 Is Early Membership Goal

Passed the Half Million Mark For 1930 On Feb. 13.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Feb. 24.—The American Legion, which had a paid up membership of 794,219 for 1929, passed the half million mark for 1930 on Feb. 13 and is now striving to reach the 600,000 goal by March 1, the urgent request of the national commander, O. L. Bodenhamer.

"It is not our purpose to seek a huge total at the end of the year," the national commander said, "but to get the membership out of the way early in the year in order to clean the decks for the Legion program of service."

The membership for this year is now thirty-one days ahead of the records shown on the national treasurer's book for last year. This means that constructive community service work, and other activities of Legion posts, will have the membership problem disposed of a month or more earlier than a year ago, and thus have that much more time to devote to accomplish other things before the next national convention is held in Boston, Oct. 6 to 9.

The rapid growth of the 1930 membership is laid to the fact that the veterans throughout the United States wish to show, through their membership in the Legion, their support of the Legion legislative program. In congress which is now in session, two of the major objectives of the Legion in congress is the adequate care of disabled veterans, and the adoption of the Reed-Wainwright resolution. The latter will provide for a competent commission to consider the principle of universal service in time of war, and adopt a plan for its operation.

Time To Stop Mosquitoes

RECENT spring weather reminds us that Hope should start early if she expects to prevent mosquitoes this year and spend a comfortable summer.

The oiling of streams and ponds within a mile of the city, and the penalizing of property owners who fail to keep their premises free of weeds and tin cans, is just as much a part of good city government nowadays as sweeping the streets or maintaining a fire department.

There was some complaint about mosquitoes last summer, although most of the city was comfortable. Let's make Hope mosquito-proof this year by eliminating the breeding places at once.

Mosquitoes are inexcusable nowadays, because city health departments know how to deal with them. The misery that used to be dealt all city dwellers in the summer-time is no longer necessary—and prompt action in the next sixty days will save a good deal of grief in June, July and August.

A New Telephone Building

THE expansion program announced last month by the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. will probably include a great many new local exchange buildings. Its great subsidiary, the Southwestern Bell Telephone company, has already constructed many fine new telephone homes in the smaller cities of Arkansas—and it looks as though Hope should be considered in the new program.

The local exchange is housed in rented quarters. Why not do Hope justice by erecting a telephone building in 1930? If we are correctly informed, the Bell System has constructed its own buildings not only for the downtown district of Little Rock, but the suburbs as well. Three years ago it put up a very fine structure at El Dorado. Similar projects in still smaller cities show that Hope ought to be in line for a new building also.

This city is on the route of one of the projected trans-continental telephone lines. It ought to have a representative telephone building to go along with it.

Men and Profits

PROF. WILLIAM LEISERSON of Antioch College suggests that industry eventually will be required to place the interests of its employees above the interests of its stockholders in certain respects. That is, when depression comes, he believes no industry will cut its payroll until it has suspended its dividends.

At present, he points out, many a concern has discharged scores of workers but continues to pay dividends regularly.

His suggestion is extremely radical, beyond doubt. It does indicate, however, the growth of the new conception that industry has a definite responsibility for the welfare of its workers. That conception will gain in strength as the years go by, whether or not it ever culminates as Professor Leiserson has suggested.

New Rivalry

LUDWELL DENNY, well-known newspaper man, declares that the United States is allying its merchant marine interests with those of Germany and is, in effect, helping to nullify a section of the Versailles treaty.

Denny makes this statement in his book, "America Conquers Britain," soon to be published.

American capital, he says, has enabled German merchant shipping since the war to grow so rapidly that it is once more rivaling Britain's. This, of course, is contrary to the aims of the peace treaty which took away Germany's entire merchant marine at the instigation of England.

With German merchant ships extending their influence with the aid of American cash, Denny says England is on the defense in a race for supremacy in naval reserves. And he points out that the situation is not unlike the rivalry between England and Germany prior to 1914 that brought on the war.

Can He EVER Be Humanized?

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—A story about Charles Evans Hughes which he once told on himself still survives after nearly 25 years.

The new chief justice was running for governor of New York in 1906 and he came back from a campaign tour reporting to his friends his surprise at finding "I had the reputation of being a very stiff-necked person."

At one stop he had been the guest of honor at the home of a Republican county chairman and had observed that the ladies of the party were paying special attention to him. Finally he noticed that while he had two or three women hanging closely on his words, the men were drifting but into another room.

Eventually the candidate disengaged himself and went into the next room. All the other men in the party were having a drink.

"I'll have a Scotch highball," said Hughes as he walked in.

"Well, by gad," exclaimed the county chairman, "he really is human, after all!"

Even in the old days, however, Hughes was always known as a "one-drink man." As secretary of state in the Harding and Coolidge cabinets he was known as a teetotaler. But except among those who knew him personally he never did quite live down his reputation for being "stiff-necked."

THE news photographers of Washington are poignantly reminded of how well Calvin Coolidge liked to have his picture taken by the frequent balking of, of President Hoover.

When Mr. Hoover leaves the White House and doesn't want to be photographed he simply lays down a secret service censorship and isn't. Thus, recently the president paid a visit to the stricken William Howard Taft and passed the word down in advance that there wouldn't be any photographs.

But the cameramen skipped out in advance and when the president arrived they were to be found both perched in trees and in the windows of neighboring houses. A couple of carloads of secret service men at once deployed in fan formation and with grim words and gestures conveyed the information that there would be no pictures taken whatever. And there weren't.

When the Hoover "medicine ball cabinet" went into action there were many photographers who would have given a right eye for a picture of it, but the orders against any photography were flat. Someone, however, finally came and poked a camera over a wall and took such a picture away. It was somewhat blurred and the only one of its kind ever published, but it aroused the folks at the White House. A determined but fruitless investigation was made to discover the identity of the culprit.

BARBS

It's almost time for spring housecleaning. Now you may find a couple of those things you have been missing since fall housecleaning.

On the front page of a Boston paper a speech of Court Karolyi is reported, in which he says we are living in a state of socialism but we don't know it. In the next column is a story to the effect that 496 people in this country are paying taxes on incomes of more than $10,000,000. You may write your own obituary.

Senator Robison of Kentucky says the sugar tariff question is of interest to people in "two or three hemispheres." We haven't had any reports from the fourth one yet, however.

The Census Bureau states a baby is born every 13 seconds. Maybe Mr. Barnum's figures ought to be revised now.

Long whiskers are becoming stylish again, according to advices from London. Well, they can't say our supreme court is old-fashioned, anyway.

Did it ever occur to you that many modern and ancient works of art are merely busts?

Dinner for 100

The long tables were made very attractive for the nearly 100 diners, with the use of immense bouquets of Perpet roses and ferns, over which lighted yellow tapers cast a mellow glow. The lavish use of dainty fronds of greenery added to the beauty of the tables, while at each place the color scheme was carried out. Nut cups in two shades of yellow were used, and the programs were tied with bows of green and yellow ribbon, the club colors, and each was decorated with a pictured slice of watermelon, surmounting the slogan, "In the Nation's Watermelon Patch." Favors were small watermelons bearing in their centers a message from the Hope Chamber of Commerce, while gayly colored post cards on which were pictured a beautiful Hope maiden about to cut the world's largest watermelon, weighing 152 1-2 pounds further drew attention to the fact that this industry is one that is attracting much attention from the entire country. A delicious seven course dinner was served to the assemblage.

Miss Ruth Rich, national field secretary, honor guest of the conference was the principal speaker of the evening and in her charming manner did much to further the interest of all present. She gave five ways by which one might be a successful club member:

1. Learn to do today the things that should be done today.
2. Nothing is impossible of accomplishment.
3. When a member is asked to do anything, respond with, "You bet I will!"
4. Be generous with your praise; eliminate envy and jealousy.
5. Assume your full share of responsibility and censure.

Miss Rich said, "Only a very few years ago it was considered almost a disgrace for a woman to work because of necessity. Now it is considered an honor. The goal of our federation is to make our work reach such a standard that we shall be able to demand equal wage with men for work equally well done. We have passed the experimental stage and as we see practically every line of endeavor undertaken by the woman of

FELT BETTER RIGHT AWAY

Lady Who Suffered From Pains and Dizziness Tells of Taking Cardui.

New York, N. Y.—After a severe illness, several years ago, Mrs. M. S. Madges, thirty-sixth Street and Seventh Avenue, this city, was left in a condition in which she was subject to "quite a bit of pain and dizziness," she says.

"This condition lingered for some time," writes Mrs. Madges, "until someone suggested I try Cardui. I don't remember who, but to her I am very grateful, for I had not taken half a bottle until I knew it was helping me, for the dizziness disappeared.

"Since that time I have taken about two bottles of Cardui each year, and this has helped to keep me in splendid condition. I recommend Cardui to people with whom I come in contact and they seem very grateful. It is a splendid builder. I don't know anything that can take the place of Cardui. I cannot say too much for the best of all tonics—to my way of thinking."

today, there can be no doubt that there is no end to our possibilities in business and professional lines."

At the conclusion of Miss Rich's address, she was presented with a beautiful Camark vase by Miss Jene Laester, representing the hostess club.

Many of the delegates accepted the invitation of the Hope club and the Saenger theatre to attend a showing of "The Locked Door" following the banquet.

Fellowship Breakfast

The "Fellowship Breakfast" was held at the Barlow hotel at 7:30 Sunday morning, with Miss Mary Burgess presiding.

The emblem collect was led by Irene Richardson of Conway, state emblem chairman, and the different symbols were enacted by the Texarkana club in costume. Group singing was led by Mrs. Talbot Feild of Hope, and round table discussions were entered into, which were presided over by different club members: "Friend Budget," was the source of an interesting discussion led by Mrs. Caroline M. Rose, Little Rock, first vice-president on a member of the finance committee.

Miss Lillie Wilson of El Dorado told of plans for making "Better Business Women for a Better Business World." She represented Miss Mollie Williams state educational chairman, who could not be present. She said the National federation was stressing the idea of each girl who enters business having a preliminary high school education, no matter what line of work might be entered. Already many business colleges are requiring this. The El Dorado club has helped finance 22 girls, loaning money to them at a stated rate of interest, and has not lost one dollar on the venture. She urged that the student loan fund be administered in a business-like manner if success is desired.

Miss Jean Laester, vice-chairman of international relations, spoke on that subject and read a letter from the chairman, Mrs. Zonola L. Snodgrass, now is resident of Paris, France. "Our international relations really our kinspeople," said Miss Laester, who stressed the need of study of this phase of political economics.

Dr. Etta Champlin, state health chairman, spoke on "Why Be Sick?" and presented a cleverly arranged and illustrated tableau, with Mrs. Talbot Feild, soloist, which elicited much favorable comment. Miss Mary Buechley of Conway, but formerly a member of the local health committee, Miss Leonora Wilson of Little Rock and Miss Forrest Ruggles, Hope, gave talks on nutrition and exercise during the course of this discussion.

At eleven o'clock the convention adjourned to the Methodist church where special services were held in their honor. The choir rendered two anthems: "Oh, Could I Speak the Matchless Words," (Hall), and "Lift Up Your Heads, O Ye Gates," (Grown). Mrs. Talbot Feild, soloist, delighted her hearers with Campion's, "The Ninety and Nine."

Dr. F. A. Buddin, pastor of the church said in part: "More money invested in stocks and corporations is controlled by women than by men. Fifty per cent. of the wealth of our nation is won by women; fifty per cent. of the incomes of more than $1,000,000,000 go to women; 54 1-2 per cent. of incomes of $100,000,000 go to women. Eighty per cent. of the life insurance policies now in force are made out to women beneficiaries; 70 per cent. of the property now owned by men is willed to women and 64 per cent. of the property owned by women is willed to women.

"Womanhood is emerging into a day of independence. She is justifying her existence by making herself a positive force in the commercial and professional world. Her value cannot be estimated nor her calibre underrated," continued Dr. Buddin.

The Convention adjourned following an emblem luncheon at the Barlow hotel at noon Sunday, which was presided over by Miss Burgess, with Miss Irene Richardson, principal speaker, who discussed "That's a Sign." Truly, it is a sign of progress for any business or professional woman to proclaim to the world through the medium of the emblem, that she is aligned with this great organization.

A Love Rewarded

Editor's Note: The following short story, in three parts, was written by Lillie Belle Loe, a pupil in the ninth grade of Blevins High School.

PART TWO

The next day was a busy one for Lorena. She did not see Dan until he called for her that night. She looked very sweet in a simple little pretty dress of soft blue, with no ornaments except her pearls. A pair of silver slippers and hose to match completed her costume.

"Geel Rena, you look like a flower," Don told her as he helped her into the car.

"Thanks, flatterer," she replied laughingly.

It was a beautiful night—the moonlight shimmering over the peaceful farms and the night birds singing softly. Donald was in a gay mood and Lorena responded with a forced gaiety that matched his. When they arrived the Vaughan home was ablaze with light. An orchestra was playing a popular air. Bright, well-dressed girls were dancing with care-free boys. Agnes was dancing with one of her college friends, Berton Davis, a dark, black-haired young man. She was stunning indeed in a bright red evening gown which suited her dark beauty to perfection. When she saw them enter she waved gaily but kept on dancing.

Agnes chose tonight to be very cool toward Don, being secure in the knowledge that she had her college friends to play around with for the next week. But on the way home Don was jubilant because she had given him the last dance.

"Wasn't Agnes lovely tonight," he exclaimed as they drove over the quiet country roads.

"Yes, she was," answered Lorena. "But she's always that way," he said musingly.

It was a tired and discouraged little girl Donald Kent left at the Sherman door that night.

"Tired, aren't you, Rena girl?" he asked gently as he helped her from the car.

"Not much, but I'm sleepy," she returned, looking so sleepy that he laughed at her.

Alas! She little knew how she would next see his dear face.

The next day dawned bright and clear but Lorena was strangely depressed. She felt as if some disaster was impending. She had just finished the dishes after lunch and was sitting on the porch trying to read, when she saw the Kent car coming down the road. Not Don's roadster, but the big sedan which Mrs. Kent always drove.

"I wonder why Mrs. Kent is driving so fast," thought Lorena. "Don't was Mrs. Kent she saw as the car drew near. It was Jones, the Kent's driver. A man, Jones, as a pleasant middle-aged man who had been in the Kent employ for years.

"Mrs. Kent sent me after you," he told Lorena breathlessly. "Mr. Don has been hurt in a car wreck."

"Oh! Not seriously?" gasped Lorena. "The doctor can't tell yet," he told her.

As she got into the car to go back with Jones, her mind was a jumble of incoherent thoughts. "Oh, God, don't let him die!" She prayed silently. Her other thought was to get to him as quickly as possible.

Jones told her as well as he could what had happened. Don had been driving at a fast rate of speed, when the steering gear of the car had broken and the roadster suddenly went over the embankment. When the rescuers reached the car Don was lying half under it and at first appeared to be dead. They rushed him home and called for the doctor.

The doctor had already arrived when Lorena reached the Kent home. She went straight to Don's room, for she knew she would find her pal there. She never forgot the scene she saw as she stepped into the room. The first thing she saw was Don. But Oh! how different he looked from the last time she had seen him. Now he was lying white and still. The laughing blue eyes were closed and the fine head was bandaged.

Mrs. Kent came into the room, sobbing softly, and put her arms around him.

Glen Coker To Be New School Head

Harold Branch To Finish Out Term For Blevins Schools.

J. Glen Coker, of Glenwood, was elected superintendent of Blevins public schools, and Mrs. Coker was chosen as an additional teacher, for the 1930-31 term, at a meeting of the Blevins School Board last Saturday.

Mr. Coker is now teaching in one of the large consolidated schools in Nevada county, and comes to Blevins with the highest recommendations. He received his A. B. degree at Henderson Brown, and had had offers from larger schools. He says all he asks of the parents of the pupils, is their cooperation, and believes he can make the Blevins schools much better and larger than they have been in the past. Mrs. Coker is teaching music in the same school with Mr. Coker, and is also a graduate of Henderson Brown in that department. She will be a part-time teacher in various departments along with her music.

At a previous meeting, last Tuesday night, Harold Branch, of Murfreesboro, was chosen temporary superintendent to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of J. C. Dunn on account of illness.

There are no other changes in the personnel, and the teachers and the grades are as follows: Mrs. Warren Nesbitt, 1st and 2nd grades; Miss Clyde Lewis, 2A and 3rd grades; Miss Colie Tanner, 4th and 5th grades, and Miss Ruby Adams, 6th and 7th grades. Miss Eva Junkin, and H. L. Lay are to hold their respective positions that they are now holding, which is in the high school.

Harold Branch of Murfreesboro, started on his duties last Wednesday morning. Mr. Branch comes to Blevins highly recommended. He held the position of superintendent in the Glenwood high school for three years, and has taught in various places in the state. He attended school at Hendrix College, Arkansas University, and Peabody College. With his leadership, the Blevins consolidated schools will be kept up to its standard for the rest of this term.

Sickness and bad weather has caused them no end of grief, and they have ably met every obstacle. The new teachers that are elected at the next meeting will be published in these columns.

Latest Type Vat Built At Dunlap

Truck Growers Spending Much Money For Improvements.

One of the large concrete vats to be used for radishes is about finished at Dunlap. It is the first vat to be made solid concrete along the P. & N. W. Ry. It is built along the tracks and the new loading platform will be built between the track, and the vat.

I. H. Beauchamp and R. W. Bond have the contract to construct the new tomato packing shed that was burned last fall. This building will be the very latest type in packing sheds, and will be modern in every particular. The total cost of all the improvements will be about $3,500. The industry has grown to such an extent, that these improvements were absolutely necessary. The radish vat will be one of the many that will be built along the P. & N. W. Ry. this season.

County Agents

4-H Clubs were organized at Bingen and McCaskill last Thursday. Several members joined at each place, and much enthusiasm was displayed in the work.

The club at McCaskill was organized around sweet potatoes, and each boy who joined the club is a member of the Sweet Potato Club. Each boy will fertilize his acre the same, plant at the same time, and cultivate alike in an effort to see who can make the largest yield of potatoes. The Bank of McCaskill is offering a prize of $10 and free slips to the member who makes the largest yield of potatoes on an acre, in an effort to stimulate effort in this truck crop project.

Sweet potatoes were chosen as the crop to grow since they make such excellent food and feed in the event there is not a proper market for them when they are ready to sell. An acre of sweet potatoes will produce more feed than an acre of corn and the labor fee, requirement is very little more than for a crop of corn. Following is a list of the boys who joined the sweet potato club, at McCaskill:

Clifford Gorham, Elmer White, Harvey Clark, Noel Buckley, Monroe Clark, Quinton Curtis, Earl Culpeper, Gerald Shuffield, Reese Hamilton, Lomae Rowland, Clovis Chism, Bert Scott, Edward W. Rinehart, and Hugh Rhodes.

BLEVINS SCHOOL NOTES

Superintendent Harold Branch spent the week end with his family at Murfreesboro. He was accompanied by H. L. Lay, who will spend the week end with his folks at Amity.

Department cards were issued this week, and the pupils are urged to have the parents sign them, and return them to their respective teachers so the teachers may give the Hope Star a list of the prize winners for last month.

Below are the names of the pupils that stood highest in their classes and department for the week ending Feb. 21st:

First grade—Barton Smith, A. J. Cullins, Elvin Brooks, Norville Thomas and Arlean Woods.

Second grade, J. W. Foster, Alton Freyburger, Willie House, Coy Zumwalt and Doris Asborne.

Third grade—Ena Fern Stephens, T. S. Bailey, Ernestine Houser, Junior Thompson and Geraldine Thomas.

Fourth grade—Billy Brown, Arlene White, Christine Brooks, Weldon Brooks, and Francis Dunn.

Fifth grade—Mary Louise Bailey, Beatrice Smith, Austin Hendrix, Audrey Ferrel and Walter Hartless.

Sixth grade—Ruby Johnson, Opal Yates, C. E. Bruce and Marie Ward.

Seventh grade—Winnie May Loe, Violet Cross, Fadra Asburn, Lucille Loe and Jimmie Loe.

Plans are now being formulated to have a track team this spring, and coach Lay said that he had abundance of material that could be worked up to a champion team. He also stated he would try to stage a meet here in the early spring. The county basketball tournament will be held the first week in March, and Blevins and McCaskill teams will be represented from this part of the county.

The material for the quilt has arrived, and the teachers are already busy putting the various names on it. Although there has been a large number of squares sold it will take much effort on the part of all of the students to get the desired number it will take to fill the quilt.

Daddy of the Seadrome

Armstrong wades in . . . makes artificial waves to test a model seadrome . . . waves which are equivalent to 180-foot swells on the open sea.

By JAMES W. BOOTH

TRANSATLANTIC flying over an air lane dotted with floating seadrome landing fields is regarded as a certainty of the very near future. For the first full-sized seadrome unit is to be put in operation this summer between New York and Bermuda.

And when it comes, a bored public, turned blasé by the long succession of modern technical triumphs, will stifle a yawn and murmur, "Very interesting!"

Interesting it will be, but the chances are that it will not be as interesting as the life of the man whose active brain and unrelenting perseverance made it possible.

What kind of a man is it who flings a chain of floating islands across the Atlantic, and adds another chapter to the story of the conquest of the sea and the annihilation of space? You may well wonder.

He is Edward A. Armstrong, now chief of the mechanical experimental division of the E. I. duPont de Nemours Co., of Wilmington, Del., formerly "The Strong Boy of Canada," professional wrestler, circus Sandow, railroad surveyor, civil and mechanical engineer.

FIRST of all, Mr. Armstrong is a Canadian by birth. While he has lived in the United States a great many years, he was born in Mount Forest, Ontario.

Three months before he was born his mother was taken ill with scarlet fever. The result was he came into the world a spindling, sickly infant, weighing but three pounds. They didn't think he would live.

His mother, watching his puny efforts to walk and lift things, used to shake her head sadly and sigh:

"Ah, Ted, you'll never be the powerful man your father is."

Now young Armstrong loved and admired his father tremendously, which is the way it should be. He wanted to be like him—a powerful man.

The remark of his mother kindled a powder train in the boy's imagination. There must be some way for a weak and sickly child to develop bone and muscle, he reasoned.

He looked about him and chanced upon a series of articles on physical culture. Exercise, fresh air, deep breathing, food! He took his lily back to the barn and started in.

HE was about 12 years old when he began his campaign for bone and muscle. At 19, he was known as the "Strong Boy of Canada, Apostle of Health and Physical Culture." On one occasion he appeared in Market Square at Galt, Ontario, and astonished his audience with feats of strength. A yellowed clipping from the weekly newspaper of Galt of some 30 years ago, tells the story:

"An immense audience assembled on Market Square Friday and witnessed a wonderful feat of strength of Edward R. Armstrong. A team of horses was attached, one to each arm of the young Samson, and he stood the strain of their pulling in opposite directions.

"Mr. Armstrong is yet in his teens and because of this the feats he performed are indeed wonderful. The exhibition consisted of lifting 2000 pounds; supporting 1500 pounds upon his chest; putting above the head with either hand a dumbbell weighing 150 pounds; putting above the head two 100-pound dumbbells, one in each hand; allowing, while seated in a chair with the legs extended in front parallel to the floor, a 225-pound man to stand on his ankles; breaking with the expansion of his chest a steel cable whose breaking strain is 1000 pounds; breaking with direct pull a steel chain capable of holding two horses; bending bars of iron up to one inch in diameter."

Mr. Armstrong laughs when he recalls that newspaper account. "Boys are curious animals," he remarks. "I had an idea I wanted to evangelize the world, make everybody strong."

"But, as for about this time I discovered a funny thing about humans. They like to watch you bend iron bars across your forearm, and pull against a team of horses, but when it comes to exercising and trying to make themselves strong, they lose interest."

MUCH water has passed under the bridge since young Armstrong was the "Strong Boy of Canada." He has traveled far. He has been a professional wrestler, circus Sandow, railroad surveyor, civil engineer and finally, due to much application of the proverbial midnight oil, a mechanical engineer of high standing.

For soon after young Armstrong became the "Strong Boy of Canada," he found that bending an iron bar across your forearm and lifting 2000 pounds wasn't a career.

He decided wrestling was. He'd put his muscle to work, he reasoned, and become a champion.

So, he packed his bag, left his Ontario home and journeyed down to Cleveland, where he walked into a famous old gymnasium where Tom Jenkins and other celebrated

Edward R. Armstrong, who worked ten years to perfect his idea on a floating island to be anchored in mid-ocean, was a professional wrestler and "The Strong Boy of Canada" in the early years of his fascinating life adventure staged. Young West Virginia mountaineers straggled in to engage in the preliminary bouts and watch the fun. The dude progressed through his trial matches without being hard pressed, and faced the first of the two football players in the semi-final. They circled around the ring for a second or so, then the dude suddenly reached out his left hand, caught the football player around the neck, and a minute later it was over.

Apostle of Health and Physical Culture. . . . "A team of horses was attached, one to each arm, and he stood the strain of their pulling in opposite directions." A 1900 photograph of Strong Boy Armstrong before he became Inventor Armstrong.

"Aw, I slipped," complained the footballer. Just before the final bout the young man from Cleveland stripped off his shirt. The amazed spectators saw a pair of muscular shoulders and the barrel chest of a trained athlete. He took the second football player without any formalities and tossed him, grunting, to the ground. Then he took both of them together and threw them in a heap, while the mountaineers howled with delight.

THAT was Armstrong's last wrestling match—except for a period a few years later when he turned aside for a strange interlude.

With a group of railroad engineers and surveyors he attended a circus in Cleveland. Of course, there was a strong man with bulging muscles who lifted dumbbells and tossed heavy weights around.

"That looks easy!" Armstrong remarked casually. "I'll bet I could do that myself."

His friends thought he was joking, but he persisted. Still believing he was joking, his friends trailed after him when the performance was over. To the amazement of his friends, Armstrong lifted all the weights, bent an iron bar over his arm and added another trick or two to the circus man's repertoire.

It so happened that the circus Sandow was quitting the following week and the circus manager hired Armstrong before the young engineer could explain it was only a joke.

For two months that summer he traveled with the circus, rode a horse in the street parade, helped the canvassmen put up the big top. And then he threw up the job and went to Texas to survey pipe lines for an oil company.

FOR the next five years, from Spindle Top to the Panhandle, he followed the oil drillers, helping solve the problems of storage and transport by day, studying books by night.

From the outbreak of the World War until he was given a leave of absence to carry on his seadrome work, he was with the E. I. duPont de Nemours Co.

The seadrome problem was to construct a floating platform large enough to give ample landing space, which would remain steady and level under all weather conditions.

Ships are designed to pitch and toss under wave action to relieve the strain on their structures.

Discarding this principle, he designed a float built on a steel skeleton framework which would permit high waves to pass under it unobstructed. He built models and tested them in a tank. Under violent wave conditions—waves equivalent to 180 feet high—his sea platform remained level, whereas the model of the steamship Majestic, built to scale, was swamped by waves 60 feet high.

Then he built a 35-foot model and tested it in the Choptank River and in the waters of Chesapeake Bay. He found the same conditions true there.

THE seadrome, when completed and planted in the ocean, will tower 80 feet in the air, its under structure a great mass of stilts, guys, braces. At the rear, between the sea and the deck, will be stabilizers similar to those on the tails of airplanes and dirigibles. The stilts will descend 170 feet into the ocean. They will be hollow tubes of metal.

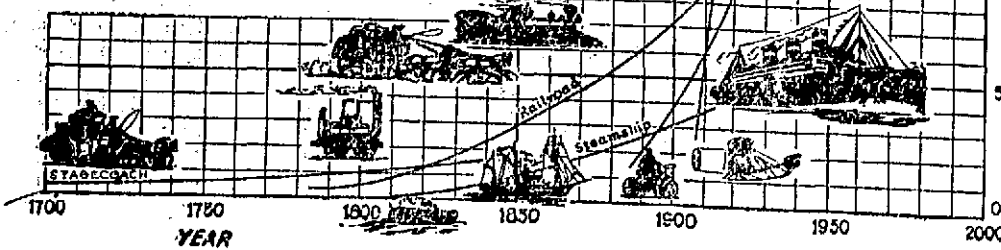

About three-quarters of the way down each of the more than 20 stilt-like tubes will be the buoyancy tanks. These tanks, divided into 16 compartments, will contain compressed air. They will be so arranged that a man can get down to them inside the "stilt" to make repairs.

"We expect these seadromes to stay at sea 20 years with repairs only from aboard the seadrome," Armstrong says.

The landing surface will be 1200 feet long, the bow and stern will be 200 feet wide. Amidships the seadrome will be 400 feet wide. There will be a modern 40-room hotel. Here also will be maintained radio communication with other mid-ocean landing stations. Radio beacons will bring planes to the seadrome regardless of fog or darkness.

The first seadrome is to be named the Langley; the second, Chanute; third, Wright, and the others Maxim, Hargrave, Henson, Phillips and Farman. Thus the pioneers of aviation will be honored by the "Strong Boy of Canada."

Fish eye view. This working model of the new seadrome shows the underwater structure of struts, ballast and buoyancy tanks which will hold the landing deck at an even keel even in a tropical hurricane.

wrestlers trained. The trainer looked over his 180 pounds of solid young flesh and nodded approvingly. He motioned to a slim middleweight wrestler.

"Try this fellow out," he ordered.

In the next 10 minutes, the "Strong Boy of Canada" learned there is a vast difference between bending bars and matching your skill against a trained wrestler. In five seconds Armstrong found himself on the floor.

"Once again, as all through his life, he had a problem on his hands. He worked, wrestled, studied, listened to the small talk of the gymnasium, and in three months he knew every trick and hold in wrestling, and could throw anyone in the place.

Armstrong was in a fair way to become the wrestling champion he thought he wanted to be, but he threw his chance away.

He made another discovery—that there is a great deal more to life than muscular prowess and skill. Some years before, he had taken a general academic course in the Collegiate Institute at Guelph, Ont. And now again he turned to books.

IN the fall of 1899 a young man journeyed from Cleveland down to West Virginia to join a gang of railroad engineers and surveyors. He was pale, his boots were new and shiny; he wore riding breeches. The stamp of the city was upon him.

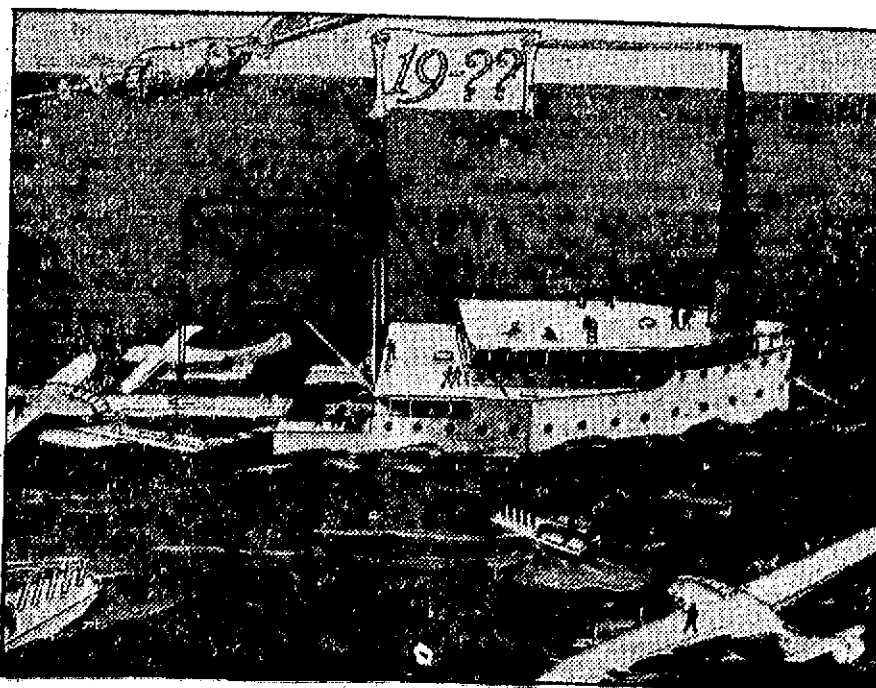

The superintendent of the surveying crew took one look at him and became enveloped in a wave of sympathy. He led the young man aside for some quiet personal advice.

"Look here," he said confidentially. "You'd better take the next train back to Cleveland. This is a rough outfit and you won't like it."

The young man shook his head. "No," he replied. "I think I'll stick. I was sent down here from Cleveland and I'm not going back. Whatever the job is, I'll try and do it."

The superintendent looked him over a moment or so, lit his pipe, and became more confidential.

"Listen, young fellow, I'm talking for your own good. We've got a couple of young ruffians in this gang. They were the two best rough-and-tumble football players in the South a year ago—and they know it. Every time a newcomer joins this crew they pick a fight with him, or challenge him to a wrestling bout. They give him the works, too. You haven't a Chinaman's chance. You'd better beat it while you've got your health."

The pale young man in riding breeches smiled. It was now his turn to become confidential. What he told the superintendent changed that gentleman's attitude.

The two young huskies pounced on the Canadian dude like hungry dogs after a bone. They argued as to which one should have the first crack at him. The superintendent proposed that an orderly match be arranged.

A few days later an informal wrestling tournament was

Menu For the Family

BY SISTER MARY
NEA Service Writer

ALTHOUGH few women attempt to make breads and rolls today with the baker supplying consistently perfect products, quick breads and rolls are very popular in the home kitchen.

During early spring, when unseasonably warm days and rains suppress appetites, fruit breads or rolls, fresh from the oven will be found uncommonly inviting when served with cottage cheese for luncheon. These rolls are quickly and easily made and give a large "return" for the effort.

The rule is basically a baking powder biscuit formula with eggs and fruit added as needed. More or less shortening is used, depending on the nature of the roll wanted.

Marmalade rolls are a kind of cinnamon roll. Any sort of jam or conserve can be used in place of marmalade and the nuts can be omitted if preferred. Prune bread is deliciously different and piquant.

Marmalade Rolls

Two cups flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 1 tablespoon sugar, 3 tablespoons shortening, 1 egg, 1-2 cup milk (about), 1-2 teaspoon salt, marmalade, 1-2 cup nuts, 1 tablespoon softened butter.

Mix and sift flour, salt, sugar and baking powder. Work in shortening with tips of fingers or pastry mixer. Beat egg until light mid cut into first mixture, adding milk to make a soft dough. Turn onto a floured molding board and roll with a floured rolling pin into a sheet about one-half inch thick. Spread with softened butter. Cover with a thin layer of marmalade of jam and sprinkle with chopped nuts. Roll up like a jelly roll and cut across in slices about one inch thick. Dip knife in flour before cutting each slice. Place slices, cut side down, on an oiled and floured pan and bake 20 minutes in a hot oven.

Prune Bread

One cup prunes, 1 egg, 1 cup white flour, 1-2 cups whole wheat flour, 5 teaspoons baking powder, 2 tablespoons melted butter, 1-2 cup sugar, 1 cup milk, 1-2 teaspoon salt.

Soak prunes for several hours in cold water to cover after washing through several waters. Bring quickly to the boiling point in water in which they were soaked. Remove from fire and let stand until cool. Drain and remove stones. Chop coarsely. Beat egg until light with sugar and melted butter. Mix and sift white flour, salt and baking powder and add to first mixture. Add milk, mix well and add whole wheat flour. Add chopped prunes before stirring in last addition of flour. Mix well and turn into an oiled and floured bread pan. Let stand for 20 minutes. Bake one hour in a moderately hot oven.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JUDITH CAMERON, New York typist, married a RUTH K. KNIGHT, executive of the Good Building, in which she is employed. Knight is a widower with a daughter, TONY, 18, and son, JUNIOR, 16. Tony detests Judith as a gold digger. When Junior comes home for Christmas holidays he is equally satisfied. ANDY CRAIG, a young man Knight has aided, takes a position with the publishing firm. He is in love with Tony and calls on her frequently. Tony tries to convince her father that Judith and Andy are really a good couple. When this fails she tricks the pair into a compromising situation.

They are carrying on a flirtation with MOCKEY MORTIMER, wealthy and married. Tony and her father quarrel over this and the girl is finally forgiven. Knight becomes dangerously ill with pneumonia, refuses to come home and stay, until his father begins to recuperate. Before leaving the boy admits to Judith he has married her.

Tony intercepts a letter intended for Judith and later follows her to the city where she meets a young man. With this information Tony forces Judith to leave the home for two weeks. Judith goes into New York, and finds a room in an inconspicuous hotel. After days of misery she decides to return and tell Andy the truth. She arrives at the home. Arthur asks coldly why she has come back. She tells him she has come to stay. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLVI

THE man's arms tightened about the girl.

"Don't, Judy," he begged. "Please don't cry!" He stroked her hair gently.

Judith clung to him. "Oh," she murmured between sobs. "It's all been so dreadful, Dan. I had to come to you. I couldn't stand it any longer!"

"Here—let's sit down. Everything's going to be all right again. You mustn't cry this way, Honey. Please—!"

The strain had snapped and with it had gone Judith's reserve strength. For several minutes she verged on hysteria. Gradually she became quieter. She lay still in Dan's arms and her sobs ceased slowly. Finally she raised her head and looked at the young man.

"Dan—you're so good to me!"

He procured a large white handkerchief and handed it to the girl. Judith wiped away the tearsdrops which still stained her cheeks.

"Now then—cold water and you'll feel better."

"I'll be all right now," she murmured. "Please don't bother—"

Then she stood up and let him help her off with her coat. The felt hat she tossed aside on the divan.

"It's all over!" she told him brokenly. "I'm never going back again. Arthur said—he said our marriage was a failure!"

"Listen, Judy, don't try to tell me about it now. Wait until you feel better. Had anything to eat?" Judith shook her head.

"But I'm not hungry," she added quickly. "I couldn't eat. Really I couldn't."

"Well—you're going to just the same! Listen, you plaster some powder on your nose and put your hat back on and out we go, to Louie's."

"No, Dan—really I couldn't possibly—!"

He clapped a hand on her shoulder. "See here, young woman, who do you think is boss here?"

"Well, I can go, but I won't eat anything."

Judith very nearly kept her word. When they had reached the restaurant and were seated at a table she tried to choke down food because she knew Dan wanted her to. It was a painful effort.

"LOUIE'S" was one of the innumerable Italian eating places where the bill of fare lists spaghetti dishes as well as steaks and chops and half a dozen varieties of American desserts.

They sat at a table for two and the young man addressed the waiter as though their acquaintance was of long standing. There was a haze of smoke in the room. The diners were beginning to thin away from the tables. Not half of the places were filled.

Judith tried to eat the soup. She tasted it, took another mouthful, then put down the spoon.

"Dan," she said, trying to keep her voice firm. "I don't know what I'm going to do. I tried—oh, I tried so hard!"

"Listen, Kid, you know how I feel about this. Well—leave the worrying to me. Besides, you're in no condition to talk now."

Most casual observers would have said the young man across the table was good-looking. His hair and eyes were dark brown. The cast of his face was slender, something like Judith's. The mustache he wore added age to a distinctly youthful face. He had a straight nose, broad lips which suggested humor, but his eyes were serious.

"You're not eating anything," he complained.

"I'm trying to eat."

"How about coffee? Wouldn't you like some coffee now?"

Judith agreed. She must bolster up her strength somehow. Perhaps coffee would help.

The young man ate heartily. He told Judith it was fortunate she had come just when she did.

"Ten minutes more and I'd have been gone!" he said. "You timed things just right, Judy."

Then he saw that this brought the troubled look back into Judith's eyes. Immediately he tried to turn her mind from herself. There was an interesting new smuggling case in the evening newspapers. Dan had read the story and related how several unnamed social celebrities were believed to be operating with underworld characters in bringing fabulously priced jewels into this country.

The girl tried to listen. Her head ached and the coffee did not relieve her nerves. She barely tasted the dessert. When she saw that Dan had finished she said:

"Can't we go now?"

"Yes, of course!" Dan arose and helped her with her coat. Ten minutes later they were back at the rooming house.
